1. The Bulgarian Army is allegedly building a great depot for gasoline in the woods near Makotchevo. There is a dirt road which leads beyond the Makotchevo railway station (where the rail line ends) and the road turns to the left (as one goes out) and leads to a tunnel. One kilometer from the station on this road is the house of Minister of Railways Stefan Tonchev. The house is on a ridge. On the opposite ridge, hidden in the woods and serviced by a spur line from the station, is the gasoline supply depot. Allegedly there are thousands of barrels of gasoline there. The barrels are exclusively guarded by Bulgarian soldiers and there are no Russians in the vicinity.
